CLASS COMMITTEE.

THOMAS FRANKLIN BROWNELL, Class Secretary,
CHARLES HARRISON TWEED,
GEORGE AUGUSTUS GODDARD.

The address of the Class Secretary is 26 Broad Street, New York City.

TO THE CLASS OF 1865.

CLASSMATES :

IN reply to my circular of April 21, 1890, I have had the pleasure of receiving reports from every one of you, except thirteen. From these reports almost exclusively, I have prepared the brief accounts of your lives for the past five years, which are set forth in the following pages. In a few instances I have added facts which you have modestly omitted to mention. The accounts of those who have failed to reply, are necessarily meagre and insufficient, but I have set down all the information that I have been able to obtain.

Since the last Report was published two of our members have died—Hanson and Shute. Notices of their lives and characters, written by friendly hands, will be found in the pages which follow.

In the last Report, announcement was made of the death of Stickney. I take pleasure in saying that there is great probability that he is still alive, as will be seen by referring to the notice of his life.

At the end of the biographical notices, I have collected the usual class statistics of deaths, marriages and births, reports of our class meetings, and a statement of the condition of the Class Fund for the past five years. An examination of the Class Fund account reveals the sad fact that the fund is shrinking faster than the Class. It is evident that we must either decrease the Class Vitality or increase the Class Fund. According to the present outlook, we shall soon be obliged to go from our Class suppers, supperless to bed.

An attempt has been made to add to each name in the list of the Class at the beginning of the Report, a summary of degrees and honors received, appointments to memberships in high schools and professorships in colleges, memberships in learned societies, and appointments or elections to judicial and other offices of honor during the last twenty-five years. I have no doubt that in the pages which follow, and especially in this summary, there are many errors and omissions. I shall be obliged to you if you will inform us of such as you may perceive. Please also notify me promptly of any changes you may make in your post office addresses.

I remain, very sincerely yours,

T. FRANK. BROWNELL,

Class Secretary.

New York City, 26 Broad St.,
5 June, 1890.

Joseph Ward, of Yankton.—Ibid, January, 1890.

He is one of the five professors in the Seminary (the editorial board of The Andover Review) against whom charges were preferred for "holding, maintaining, and inculcating opinions contrary to the teachings of the creed of Andover Theological Seminary." His "Statement in Defence," together with the general history of the "Matter of Complaint," is published in "The Andover Defence." (Cupples, Upham & Co., Boston, January, 1887.) He and three of his colleagues were acquitted before the "Board of Visitors," but Professor Egbert C. Smyth, D.D., was condemned.

He delivered the address at the dedication of the Academy of Music, at Haverhill, Mass., which was printed in the Haverhill Gazette, and an address on the "Outlines of a Philosophy of Delivery," before the American Institute of Instruction, held in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., which was printed in the Report of the Proceedings of the Institute.

He has prepared a Hand-Book of Elocutionary Instruction and "Principles of Delivery," for the use of classes and criticism.

Address : 10 Tremont street, Boston, Mass.

WILLIAM JASON GOLD. He sends the following " egotistical particulars " to the Secretary :

" During the year 1885 I held the position of examining chaplain to the Bishop of Milwaukee, and from 1885 to the present time I have held the same office in the diocese of Chicago.

" At the opening of this Seminary of the Episcopal Church, September 29, 1885, I was appointed Professor of Exegesis and Liturgics, and placed in charge of the intellectual curriculum and internal life of the school, in which position I have continued ever since,

"In 1886, I was elected a deputy to the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church from the diocese of Chicago. At this convention I was appointed a member of the Joint Committee on the Revision of the Prayer Book, and at the close of the session was again appointed upon a committee on the same subject to sit in the interim and report to the succeeding convention three years later. In 1889, I was again elected a deputy from Chicago, and presented a minority report opposing all further revision, which report was my own composition. This movement was, however, defeated after a very close vote and the report of the majority prevailed. In this convention I was also a member of the committee on the admission of new dioceses.

"I have not yet published any book, though I may some time astonish the world theological by a commentary on the Epistle to the Romans which I have had by me for some time in manuscript. I have not yet sought a publisher, and strongly suspect that I should not meet with much eagerness in that direction, in view of the fact that there are already more than one hundred commentaries on the same book. In 1885, I was the author of a report on the changes in the Prayer Book, which was presented at the diocesan convention of Milwaukee and was unanimously adopted. A large edition was ordered printed for general distribution. In 1886, I printed a pamphlet entitled "The Method of Liturgical Revision." I have published a few review articles, and during the last two years have been one of the editors of The Living Church, a weekly newspaper published in this city, contributing a large part of the leading articles, especially upon controversial subjects, and notes on subjects of the day.

"At the commencement of Racine College, in June, 1885, I received the degree of S. T. D., the equivalent, as you know, of D. D. This was on the occasion of my resignation of the Greek Professorship, and was coupled with a note from the board of trustees referring in very flattering terms to my eight years' service at the college.

"My dear wife died very suddenly, September 18, 1888, after many years of ill health. Her name and other particulars have already appeared in the class Reports.

"I had long looked forward to being present at the twenty-fifth anniversary meeting, but find that my engagements at that time will take me westward instead of eastward. This is a matter of much regret with me, as I have met only two or three members of the class since our graduation.

"Nevertheless, I venture to send my heartiest greetings to the class of '65, and to wish all its members length of days and abundant prosperity. Possibly one or two may remember a shrinking boy from the South by the name of Gold, who wore long hair after the fashion of his fellow natives of the sunny clime, and who felt very much alone, being generally burdened with the suspicion (unjust no doubt) that he was accounted a rebel sympathizer."

Address : Western Theological Seminary, 1113 Washington Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

FRANCIS BUNKER GREENE. He continued to practice law at New Bedford, as a member of the firm of Stetson and Greene, till 1887, when he retired from the firm. He has not since been engaged in active practice.

He is a member of the Harvard Club and the University Club, of New York, and of the Junior Athenæum Club and the Century Club, of London.

He has visited London annually on business.

Address : 20 Wall street, New York city.

*JAMES IRA HANSON. James Ira Hanson was born in West Cambridge (now Belmont), Mass., January 23, 1843. He was from sturdy New England stock (his parents still living at an advanced age), although he did not seem to inherit a strong constitution. The family moved to Winchester, Mass., while he was only a lad, where he was educated in the public schools, fitting for college in the high school, and entering Harvard University in 1861. During his junior year, July 1864, he imbibed the spirit of patriotism and enlisted for three months as private in the Union army. He served his full time, and was discharged November 11. Joining his class again on his return he graduated with it in 1865.

After graduation he began his life-work, teaching in the Lexington high school until the Spring of 1866, when he was elected Principal of the Uxbridge high school. Here he remained until September, 1868, resigning to accept a position as subprincipal in the Woburn high school. He was twice invited to this field, but declined the first call because he did not feel that he could honorably leave before the expiration of his engagement.

He was married, July 14, 1869, at Uxbridge, to Helen Capron Adams, a lady of refined and educated tastes, whose acquaintance and friendship he had formed while teaching in Uxbridge. Three children were born to them ; Edith Abbie, May 22, 1872, James Chester, March 20, 1874, and Clifford Taft, July 20, 1877, all of whom are living.

His connection with the Woburn high school continued through a period of twenty years lacking a few months, in all but three of which he held the office of principal. He loved his profession, giving to it his whole attention. As a teacher he held an enviable rank, winning a success such as few ever surpass. His power of managing and instructing young people was natural and without any apparent effort. He was always popular with his pupils, and retained their respect and friendship throughout his lifetime. A thorough scholar himself, he aimed to make his pupils thorough, not alone in scholarship, but in the higher qualities which tend to elevate human character. His college classes, as a rule, passed very creditable examinations for entrance to college, one young man receiving the distinguished honor of passing the best examination of any in a large class admitted to one of our New England colleges.

As a writer and speaker he avoided public notice as much as possible, but showed that he had ability in both directions whenever duty called it forth. As an author, the revision of Peck's Ganot's Natural Philosophy, a book of large circulation formerly, attests his power and skill.

His was a busy life, too busy to afford sufficient recreation. He spent much of his time out of school hours in teaching special classes and individuals who needed extra attention, and for which he received no compensation. He was held in high esteem by the entire community in which he lived, and was a welcome guest in its social circles. He had an observing nature and a keen sense of wit and humor, combined with an originality of expression, which rendered him always an agreeable companion.

While in the army he contracted a disease of the digestive organs which made him suddenly and alarmingly ill at times, which disease followed him through life, but the malady which finally proved fatal had long threatened him. Twelve years before his death he was prostrated by a hemorrhage of the lungs, but recovered in a few months through systematic training and exercise, so as to resume his work and continue in it. Still, he was obliged to struggle continually against this unrelenting enemy, and it was herein that he showed the best qualities of the man, exhibiting a courage and a patience that were heroic. When he saw clearly that recovery was hopeless, he sent his resignation to the school committee, who, recognizing the value of his past services, requested him to withdraw it, and to consent to act as the nominal principal while he lived, which he did. He died April 15, 1888, uttering these parting words, "In my father's house are many mansions,—there is one for me."

D.

LEBBEUS HORATIO MITCHELL. He remained in London, as vice and deputy consul general of the United States, until May, 1885, having been appointed to that office in December, 1881.

In 1882, he went to Cairo under a professional engagement with the Egyptian Government, as geologist and engineer, and remained about three years. He was employed on both coasts of the Red Sea opposite Mt. Sinai, in making geological explorations in reference to the question of petroleum. During this work he traveled over about six thousand square miles of the coast country, and definitely settled the once disputed question of the existence of petroleum bearing rock strata extending into both Africa and Asia, and also underlying the Red Sea basin.

His report of these explorations was published by the Egyptian government in 1887, under the title "Ras Gemsah and Gebel Zeit, Report on their Geology and Petroleum."

Financial troubles on the part of the government having caused for the time being a suspension of the work, he gave up his employment and returned to America, in March, 1889. After residing in Washington for about three months, he came to New York, where he now is.

He received the degree of Civil Engineer at Union College, in 1857. He is a member of the Masonic Fraternity, and of the Khedevial Geographical Society of Cairo. In 1881, he was decorated by the Sultan of Turkey on recommendation of the Khedive of Egypt, as Officer of the Order of Osmanieh, for the faithful discharge of his various and ofttimes perilous duties.

In the fifth Report, a short account was given of his capture in Abyssinia, in 1877, by a roving band of natives, and of his sufferings during his captivity. His report to the Egyptian government concerning this occurrence was published by the government in 1878, and is entitled "Report on the Seizure by the Abyssinians of the Geological and Mineralogical Reconnaissance Expedition, attached to the General Staff of the Egyptian Army. By L. H. Mitchell, Chief of the Expedition. Containing an Account of the Subsequent Treatment of the Prisoners and Final Release of the Commander. Cairo. Printing Office of the General Staff. 1878."

He is a member of the Somerset Club, the St. Botolph Club, the Country Club, and the Athletic Association—all of Boston, and of the Wamsutta Club of New Bedford.

Address: 289 Beacon street, Boston, Mass.

*CHARLES BAILEY SHUTE. The death of our classmate, Dr. Shute, came to us as a sudden shock, for no one seemed more likely than he to fill out the years of a well rounded life of usefulness. A moderate attack of typhoid fever was followed by a heart failure, and he quietly passed away on Sunday morning, November 25, 1888. After the publication of our last Class Report, he remained in Malden and in the practice of his profession until his death.

Charles Bailey Shute was born in Malden, Mass., January 24, 1843, and in this place almost the entire round of his life was spent. In his boyhood he seemed to possess the same studiousness and earnestness as characterized his collegiate and professional life. He obtained most of his early education in the public schools of his native town, graduating from the high school at the early age of fourteen. After spending a year at a private school in Medford, he joined the senior class of the Chauncy Hall school in Boston, and entered college as a freshman in 1861. Those of us who chanced to know him intimately at Cambridge will recall his faithfulness, his thorough conscientiousness, the perfect uprightness of his conduct and his genuine sturdiness of character. The same traits as were marked in him during his later life, an unwillingness to accept any truth until his own reasoning had made it clear to him, and an unflinching, immovable adherence to what his own perceptions told him to be right, were equally prominent in his student days. His slowness in yielding assent gave him perhaps the appearance of the less brilliant scholar, but no one grasped a truth more fully when his reason had made it his own. His uniform studiousness bore fruit in an excellent class rank, and gave him a junior exhibition and a commencement part. In the range of his companionship he was esteemed for his genuineness and good fellowship.

After graduation he tried his hand a short time at teaching, being for a few months principal of a high school in North Abington, Mass., and for the remainder of a year sub-master of the Brookline high school. He had, however, determined upon medicine as his profession, and this choice in some degree modified his selection of studies in college, and dominated his reading during the subsequent year. In 1866, we find him at work preparing for his profession with Dr. J. L. Sullivan, of Malden, with whom he afterwards entered into a partnership lasting some ten years. In 1867, he is a student in the Harvard Medical School, in 1869, house physician of the Boston City Hospital, taking his M. D. in June, 1870. In 1871, he is a member of the Walker Society of Medical Improvement, and in 1876, a councillor of the Massachusetts Medical Society, becoming also an A.M. in course.

His eighteen years of professional practice were a period of constant and increasing usefulness. His serious conscientiousness in attending to details stood him in good stead during these fruit-bearing years of his life, and gave him the confidence of the community, while his kindliness of spirit and his desire to be helpful made him the "beloved physician." The many tokens of esteem which came to his family after his death bear ample witness to this. Said one of him, "He was a true noble-hearted manly man. He was one in whom you could repose the most perfect confidence. The secrets imparted to him he would lock up in his own heart. You could place your household in his keeping and know that all that science and skill could do would be theirs. He was more than a physician, larger than his profession." A part of 1875, he spent in study in the hospitals of Vienna, and later was fortunate enough to enjoy a trip in a professional way to Fayal. At the time of his death he had been successful in acquiring a large and important professional practice.

Although busy in the work of an exacting profession, his own inclinations led him to touch other interests than those which were strictly professional. He became connected with the Masonic Order ; was a Knight Templar and an Odd Fellow. His avocations, however, may be said to have been in connection with Mutual Benefit Insurance Associations, in several of which he was medical examiner. Among these that known as the Golden Cross was his favorite. In it he became a trusted councillor, and to its organ he contributed a number of articles bearing upon this form of insurance. This paper said of him after his death, that at the next annual meeting he would have been chosen its Grand Commander.

In 1884, his city manifested its confidence in him by an election to its school board, and during the last two years of his life he was chairman of this board. Here his wise activity found ample field for usefulness, and his time and experience were given to the schools of Malden in no stinted measure. He spared himself no labor that he might be familiar with the details of the duties of the office. An associate says, "No important question came before the board on which he had not formed an opinion and he was ready to give his reason therefor." Usually his careful consideration and sound judgment led him to take an impregnable position in the discussions of the board, and consequently his influence was not exceeded by that of any other member.

His mind was keenly alive to all matters of public interest, both those local and those outside, and his nature was such that he could not refrain from taking his full part in them. We accordingly find him entering with all his heart into the activities of his city. He held, however, no other public office than that of school committeeman. Outspoken and unequivocal in his sentiments he found it impossible, nor did he try, to frame his own views to meet those of a party or his friends. This with an even balance of judgment and his genuineness of character secured him the confidence in a very high degree of his own community.

Dr. Shute had a nature which was vitally religious, but his religion was of that cast in which a sense of duty rather than sentiment or feeling seemed to predominate. That the mainspring of his life lay in the higher obligation which he owed to the Unseen was clear to all who knew him. He was a member of the Baptist church, but his practical mind forbade the predominance of any sectarianism in his nature.

With matters professional, social and public, the later years of Dr. Shute were filled with an unremitting activity. Between such a life and one of scholarship and the delights of study, even the most ambitious is compelled to make his choice. No one in these days can follow both, and our friend found it so. He frequently regretted that he must witness the great stream of literature flowing by him or look out upon the great ocean of the past, and yet, in spite of his inclinations he could only be permitted to gather up as much as his profession demanded. We must accord him the praise of making his choices and of living his life in a spirit of devotion and self-denial worthy of admiration.

Dr. Shute married in 1871, Ella Robinson Ewins. In 1872, a son, and in 1873, a daughter, were born, both of whom died within a few months of each other, in 1877. The writer of this who saw him under the shadow of this double loss and knew his deep tenderness of nature cannot refrain from an expression of admiration for the strength which his deep calmness and resignation manifested. It was in the home which he had made and in his family life, in spite of his keen relish for the activities of a busy career, that his affection most centered. A second son and daughter, born subsequent to his great sorrow, with the beloved wife, live to honor the memory of the husband and father gone on before. We wonder at that Providence which removes a man when he has attained the full development of his powers and when he is in the ripest period of his usefulness, and cannot avoid the feeling that these activities the Infinite Father is employing in some other field in his great universe.

sailed for Europe again, 26 June, 1889, and returned, 13 September, 1889.

Address : Washington University, St. Louis, Mo.

CHARLES EDWARD SOUTHER. His residence, occupation and place of business remain as stated in the last Report. His firm of Wheeler and Souther was dissolved in September, 1885, and in December, 1885, was succeeded by that of Souther and Stedman (Ernest G. Stedman, Yale, 1867), which still continues.

He visited Europe in the autumn of 1889.

In addition to the clubs mentioned in previous Reports, he is a member of the Orange Athletic Club, the Essex County Country Club (N. J.), the New Jersey Floricultural Society, and the Harvard Club of New York city.

A daughter, Jean Whittier, was born, 17 September, 1886, and died, 6 August, 1887.

Address : 120 Broadway, New York city.

GEORGE ALBERT STEARNS. Not heard from. At the date of the last Report he was engaged in the practice of law at 63 Fulton street, in New York city, but I can find no trace of him since then.

*GEORGE WOODBURY SWETT. He died at Bonn, Germany, 27 July, 1869. See Secretary's Report, No. 3.

THOMAS EDMUND SYMMES. He sends the following account of his life :

" For the last five years I have resided in Graniteville, continuing in the same occupation as stated in my last report, extending it more particularly in the direction of poultry raising. My health is pretty good, perhaps rather better than usual, though occasionally troubled with rheumatic disabilities.

" Three children have been born to me since the last Report : Mabel Maria, born, July 28, 1886 ; Martha Washington, born, February 22, 1888 ; and Paul Edward, born, March 12, 1890.

" I have paid but little attention to literary pursuits. The demands of the larder have forbidden it. I have, however, written two articles for The Protest, a prohibition paper, that was published at Concord, N. H. The first, entitled "Allegiance to Party Platform," was published, August 17, 1889; the second, entitled "The Weal of the Country," was published September 28, 1889. In the dearth of any thing remarkable to write, I will say that I have in process of manufacture a rhythmical composition entitled "The History of the Church and the Home of the Blest." It has already reached over 500 lines. I intend it shall contain between 1,000 and 1,500 pentameter lines. My little star has not yet reached sufficient magnitude to be seen, and, consequently, I have not been decorated with any further college degrees."

Address: Graniteville, Mass.

JOHN KERR TIFFANY. Not heard from since 1878. When last reported he was engaged in practicing law in St. Louis.

I learn from the daily press that he is the author of a "History of the Postage Stamps of the United States," and that he has been president of the American Philatelic Association.

*FREDERICK WARE. He died at Bad Soden, Prussia, 24 July, 1869. See Secretary's Report, No. 3.

WILLIAM HARRINGTON WARREN. In reply to the Secretary's circular, he writes as follows:

"On the first of March, 1887, I left my delightful home and a very pleasant and successful pastorate of nearly twelve years in Springfield, Ohio, to come to Cincinnati, in response to the urgent invitation of my present people and others, who knew of me and the work to be done here in the down town portion of this largest city of the State. The reluctance with which my Springfield people, and the citizens generally, consented to my leaving them was made evident in the papers which I mailed you at the time.

"My work here is in connection with that problem which is of vital moment in all our large cities. How shall these down town districts of all such cities be permeated with moral and Christian influences? I am trying to contribute my mite to the solution of the problem, and find much more of encouragement than I expected."

For a time prior to leaving Springfield, he was president of the board of directors of the Associated Charities of that city.

Address: Vine street, between 8th and 9th, Cincinnati, Ohio.

*HENRY CLEVELAND WELLMAN. He died in Brookline, Mass., 18 July, 1866. See Secretary's Report, No. 2.

He resigned his seat in the Boston Stock Exchange in January, 1886. He is a director of the San Diego Land Company.

He is a member of the American Association for Advancement of Science, the Military Historical Society, the Naturalist Club, the St. Botolph Club, the Algonquin Club, the Boston Athletic Association, and the Thursday Evening Club.

He is commodore of the Massachusetts Yacht Club, and lieutenant commander of the Naval Battalion M. V. M. He is a member also of the Hull, Corinthian, Eastern Corinthian and New York yacht clubs.

Address: 68 Devonshire street, Boston, Mass.

*FREDERIC WILLIAM SPARRELLE. He died at Key West, Fla., 11 July, 1875. See Secretary's Report, No. 5.

WILLIAM BRUNSWICK CURRY STICKNEY. In the last Report, it was announced, upon the strength of information received from sources which seemed trustworthy, that Stickney had died. Since then he has presented to the Secretary some facts tending to show that he is probably alive. There is ground for belief that he lunched with Durant in Boston, in 1885; that he dined with Hosmer in Chicago, in 1886; that he had talked with Poor and Greenough at the same time in New York, in 1890; that he called several times upon Brownell, in 1890—but not officially. Under the circumstances, while the Secretary is of the opinion that it is not within the powers of his office to decide finally a question of life or death like the one now presented, he yet feels justified in placing Stickney's name provisionally upon the list of those still alive. He however leaves for the Class the decision of the main question, as well as that of printing the obituary.

In 1871, as stated in the Third Report, Stickney was engaged in the practice of law, in Portland, Me., having been admitted to the bar in December, 1870. In 1872, he moved to Lowell, Mass., where he remained for about two years, as confidential clerk for J. C. Ayer, "of globular fame." In August, 1874, he removed to Bethel, Vt., and had been engaged in practicing law there for eleven years, when the announcement of his death was made. If the Class shall finally decide that he is still alive, he is now engaged in practicing law at Bethel.

In February, 1877, he married Mary Hunton, daughter of Augustus P. and Caroline Hunton, of Bethel, Vt. A son, William, was born, 6 March, 1878, and a daughter, Mary, 24 November, 1882, "both unmarried."

Address: Bethel, Windsor County, Vt.

FREDERICK RUSSELL STURGIS. He has remained in New York city engaged in the practice of medicine. In 1874, he was appointed clinical lecturer on venereal and skin diseases, in the medical department of the University of the City of New York. He held this office until 1880, when he was appointed clinical professor in the same department of the University. In 1881, he resigned this professorship, and became professor of venereal and genito-urinary diseases in the New York Post Graduate Medical School and Hospital. He resigned in 1890. From 1882 to 1888, he was secretary of the faculty and from 1887 to 1890, director in this institution.

He was appointed, 26 June, 1876, surgeon in the department of venereal and skin diseases of the New York Dispensary, and held this office until 1880. He was appointed, 29 October, 1877, house physician at the last named institution, and held this position for about two years. Since 1873, he has been a visiting surgeon to the venereal and genito-urinary division in the Charity Hospital, on Blackwell's Island.

He continues his membership in the Medical Society of the County of New York. He was for several years a member of its board of censors, and in 1882, its president. In addition to the societies mentioned in the last Report, he is a member of the American Association of Genito-Urinary Surgeons, and of the Medical Society of the State of New York. In the latter, he was chairman of the committee on legislation, in 1883.

He has published the following:

He is member of the New York Athletic Club, the New York Rowing Club, the University Club and the Harvard Club, of New York.

From May, 1885, to May, 1888, he was a member of the committee on admissions of the University Club.

Address: 16 West 32d street, New York city.

FREDERICK HENRY THOMPSON. For the past five years he has continued to reside in Fitchburg, Mass., engaged in the practice of medicine.

In May, 1886, he went to Europe for a visit of six weeks.

Address: Fitchburg, Mass.

CHARLES JACKSON TRAIN. He remained on duty in the Navy Department at Washington for two years. From November, 1886, to May, 1889, he was in command of the United States steamer Jamestown. In November, 1889, he was ordered to duty as inspector of the fifth light-house district, with his office in Baltimore.

He is a member of the Metropolitan Club and the Columbia Athletic Club, of Washington, and of the University Club, of New York.

Address: Care of the Navy Department, Washington, D. C.

THOMAS WREN WARD. He continued in business in New York city as member of the firm of S. G. and G. C. Ward, until the dissolution of that firm in January, 1886. Since then, he has been connected with the firm of Kidder, Peabody and Company.

Address: Care of Kidder, Peabody and Company, 15 Wall street, New York city.

JOSEPH HENRY WILLARD. Not heard from. He still holds his commission of captain of engineers in the United States army. At present he is stationed at Vicksburg, Miss. where he has been on duty for several years.

He has married since the last Report.

Address: Vicksburg, Miss.

JAMES HARVEY WITHINGTON. Not heard from. A few years ago he left California and removed to New York city. His business at that time was in connection with western mines. Since then I have lost sight of him and do not know his present address.

GENERAL SUMMARY.

Our Class, while in college, numbered 129. Of these, 75 were graduated in 1865, and 9 afterwards received degrees of A. B., as of that year, making 84, whose names appear in the quinquennial catalogue as alumni of 1865. Of this number, 2 have died since the last Report, and 20 since graduation, leaving 64 graduated members now living. 49 of these are married, 10 unmarried, and 5 are widowers. 10 have lost their wives by death, of whom 5 have married again. 131 children have been born, of whom 113 are now living.

Of the 45 temporary members, 35 are now living. 26 of these are married, 9 unmarried, and 2 have lost their wives by death and married again. 60 children have been born, of whom 47 are now living.

250TH ANNIVERSARY.

At the Commemoration of the 250th anniversary of the founding of Harvard College, in 1886, our Class was represented upon the Committee of Arrangements, appointed to co-operate with the executive committee of the Association of the Alumni, by Clifford, in the Anniversary Chorus by Curtis, and among the marshals by Brownell. Clifford collected from the members of the Class and paid to the treasurer of the Committee of Arrangement, one hundred and fifty dollars as the contribution of the Class to the expenses of the celebration.

Our marshal reports that he had charge of the section of the procession which contained about two dozen college presidents, and that only one of these succeeded in getting away before the close of the exercises.

The following members of the Class are on the registry of those present : Boardman, Brownell, Chadwick, Churchill, Clifford, Curtis, Dillaway, Durant, French, Frost, D. S. Greenough, Jackson, Leeds, C. J. Lincoln, Mifflin, Perkins, Putnam, Rotch, Shute, Tucker, Wilder, H. B. Williams and Greenleaf. Brackett, as Speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, was among the official guests.

CLASS SUBSCRIPTION FUND.

No change has taken place in the condition of this fund since the last Report. At the date of the fourth Report, the sum of $1,990 had been paid in by our Class. Goddard still represents our Class in the "Committee of Forty," appointed to collect this fund, and is a member of its executive committee.
